9.00-10.30	PLENARY SESSION: Taking Stock: Progress and Challenges for Effective Development The Global Partnership was established to improve development co-operation through enhanced effectiveness, ensure accountability for implementing development effectiveness commitments, exchange knowledge and support country-level implementation. Five years on from Busan, it is time for an objective reflection on progress implementing the effectiveness agenda, including highlighting achievements and addressing shortcomings. This plenary session will take stock of progress and achievements on commitments to implement the four development effectiveness principles. It will highlight significant bottlenecks encountered in achieving these commitments in recent years and showcase examples of what has worked and why – at local, country, regional and global levels.			AMPHITHEATRE SESSION: 09.00-9.45: What Do We Gain or Lose by Expanding the Development Effectiveness Agenda? The effectiveness principles are able to address the challenges encapsulated by the 2030 Agenda. However, it may not be a seamless transition. This Amphitheatre Session aims to identify how work on the development effectiveness principles will change once the 2030 Agenda becomes a larger focus for the Global Partnership, and what this will mean for us as development stakeholders in the partnership. It will ask what the different stakeholders in the Global Partnership might gain and/or lose by adjusting to the new Agenda, particularly in relation to: trust and accountability among development partners; respect for civic space; and donor commitments. This Amphitheatre Session will consider how stakeholders feel about possible synergies and clashes between the different groups working on development effectiveness and the SDGs; the benefits and threats to the four development effectiveness principles when they are exposed to this universal and integrated agenda; and the potential risk of the Global Partnership losing its impact in a crowded space of multilateral platforms. It will ask if we should address this or just get on with agreed business.

Participants will be encouraged to share innovative ways to ensure greater progress on development effectiveness commitments. The plenary will build consensus on, and provide high-level political endorsement for, priority actions that development actors will take to achieve existing commitments to improve the quality, effectiveness and impact of development co-operation.

AMPHITHEATRE SESSION:
9.45-10.30: Sustainable Development and its Financing: the Use of Country-led Results Frameworks

A country-led results framework is led or originated by the government of the country itself. It can include any form of government-led planning instrument that defines a country's approach to development, sets out its development priorities and establishes the results expected to be achieved. It also outlines the systems and tools to monitor and evaluate progress towards these targets, determines the baseline and establishes indicators for measuring progress.

By aligning with a country-led results framework, development partners ensure that development co-operation addresses the country's priorities and contributes to its capacity to plan, monitor, evaluate and communicate its progress towards sustainable development.

In this Amphitheatre Session, the Global Partnership Initiative on Results and Mutual Accountability, led by Bangladesh and Switzerland, will share the results of a pilot programme on the enhanced use of country-led results frameworks. The pilot programme is being implemented in co-operation with regional platforms from Africa, Asia and the Pacific, and Latin America and the Caribbean.

The pilot focuses on strengthening national development plans, creating effective results frameworks and improving linkages between planning and financing including through the use of integrated national financing frameworks. The session will identify areas for improvement in country-led results frameworks and financing the SDGs.

There is broad agreement that an income-only measure is insufficient and international development actors increasingly recognise the multi-dimensionality and complexity of poverty. Nevertheless, the income-based measure remains the most commonly used to monitor poverty. This Amphitheatre Session will debate the difficulties faced in moving from an income based to a multi-dimensional measurement of poverty. It will focus on what Southern approaches to poverty have to offer other development actors.

While there is a gender indicator, there is no indicator for youth. The youth are a unique and dynamic constituency who are in danger of being left behind in the 2030 Agenda. Youth policy development, programming and interventions at global and national levels require good evidence based on disaggregated data. A youth indicator could be used to develop new policies and strengthen the existing ones for effective youth economic empowerment. In this Amphitheatre Session, participants will discuss the value of adding a youth indicator to the monitoring framework, identifying the gaps that it would fill and the contribution it would make to improving the effectiveness of development co-operation.

Development assistance should be channelled in ways that help to build that trust by enabling state institutions to fulfil their core responsibilities to provide essential services, such as those framed in the Peacebuilding and State-building Goals of the New Deal for Engagement in Fragile States. young people. The goal of this plenary session is to deliberate on the accountability of development stakeholders in relation to women's rights, gender equality and the rights of the youth in the context of development co-operation.

It will call for accelerated efforts by all partners to unleash the power of youth and women as dynamic contributors to society, to protect and promote their economic rights, to create synergies, share good practices and leverage existing knowledge on the promotion of the economic empowerment of women and youth.

Country ownership and leadership are central to effective development co-operation, as well as sovereignty considerations that recognise the importance of an inclusive state, able to exercise authority over its territory and be accountable to its population. States have core responsibilities for responding to citizens' needs and aspirations. This builds trust in state institutions. It is however, not an exclusive responsibility. This is why the New Deal's focus on legitimate politics and inclusive planning processes, grounded in the context and including the variety of stakeholders (civil society, business sector, parliaments), is crucial to develop and implement sustainable solutions.

This Amphitheatre Session will debate how to ensure that Leaving No-One Behind does not contradict country ownership, country leadership and use of country systems, which are at the core of development effectiveness.

AMPHITHEATRE SESSION:

11.15-12.00: Eradicating Poverty in Middle-Income Countries: Whose Responsibility?

In 2012, Andy Sumner argued that "half of the world's poor live in India and China (mainly in India), a quarter of the world's poor live in other MICs (primarily populous lower-income MICs such as Pakistan, Nigeria and Indonesia) and a quarter of the world's poor live in the remaining 35 low-income countries. Underlying this pattern is a slightly more surprising one: only 7 percent of world poverty remains in low-income, stable countries" (Sumner, 2012, Where do the World's Poor Live? A New Update, IDS Working Paper, Vol 2012, No 393). This raises the question of who is responsible for addressing poverty and reducing inequality in middle-income countries, where the majority of the world's poor are found. In this Amphitheatre Session, we will debate if the global development community should focus on eradicating extreme poverty in middle income countries when many of these countries have the resources to do so themselves.

PLENARY SESSION: Our Greatest Challenge: Leaving No-One Behind

The global community has committed to achieving an ambitious agenda for sustainable development, promising that no-one will be left behind. We aim to achieve sustainable development for everyone, everywhere – for all countries and groups, and especially for the most vulnerable in our societies.

This plenary session will identify those at most risk of being left behind in fragile and conflict affected situations and amongst marginalised people in middle-income countries. It will showcase action being taken to address the challenge of reaching those furthest left behind first, and agree how all actors can work together to achieve effective sustainable development.

AMPHITHEATRE SESSION: 14.00-14.45: Enabling Environment for Partnerships

The realisation of the SDGs requires the engagement of all development actors and considerable stock has been placed on multi-stakeholder partnerships as a means to progress. Yet, it cannot be assumed that partnerships – whether involving dialogue, agreements or implementation – will be inclusive.

This Amphitheatre Session focuses on what kind of context is needed to make partnerships work. This will be done by identifying key enabling environment challenges for diverse actors to engage in effective and inclusive partnerships and provide a lively debate on actions that Global Partnership stakeholders can take.

	It will highlight the importance of multi-stakeholder partnerships; the role of national governments in policy making and enhancing state-citizen relations; the critical role that development effectiveness principles play in addressing poverty; specific actions that each development actor can take to address poverty, inequality, vulnerability and exclusion; and how to work in partnership to achieve this.	AMPHITHEATRE SESSION: 14.45-15.30: Improving the Quality of Partnerships With much focus on the potential results of partnerships, little attention has been given to the process of partnering itself. Partnering can be challenging despite the best of intentions. This is due to a variety of factors, including conflicting interests, power imbalances between partners, changing contexts, poor partnering practices and unmanageable complexities. This Amphitheatre Session will focus on practical solutions to facilitate effective partnerships at the country level to deliver on an inclusive and transformative agenda that leaves no-one behind. It will focus in particular on building an effective culture for partnering, aligning for impact behind national priorities and exploring how shared principles could help guide collaborative efforts that overcome potential conflicts of interest and benefit the broader collective.
15.30-15.45	COFFEE BREAK
15.45-17.15	PLENARY SESSION: From Global Goals to Action: Unleashing the Power of Partnerships Achieving the Sustainable Development Goals will be as much about the effectiveness of development co-operation as it will be about the quantity and form such co-operation takes. The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development is marked by inclusivity, integration and universality, with a fundamental shift expected in the development finance architecture. Improving the effectiveness, quality and impact of development co-operation in this context will require inclusive partnerships, innovative approaches and the application of lessons at country level. This plenary session aims to create a sense of urgency on the need for effective partnerships in achieving the SDGs and will contribute to this in three ways. It will showcase the diversity of partnerships and how they work. It will then facilitate a dialogue on how we can boost multi-stakeholder partnering – based on lessons learned – in reaching the SDGs. Finally, it aims to identify key success factors and further action needed from the Global Partnership to enable, catalyse and support effective partnering.
